

“Survive and Thrive in the Multi-Generational World”

Introduction for Rita Murray

Dear Introducer: Thank you for accepting the responsibility of introducing me, and creating an enthusiastic beginning to my presentation. Because this is the beginning of my talk, it is important that you read the following information, as written, WITH GREAT ENTHUSIASM! Thank you, in advance for the professionalism that I know you will add to my session.

If you're interested in the power that multi-generational awareness can bring to your workplace; if you're intrigued by the impact that our multi-generational workforce can have today and in the future, then you'll be interested in hearing our guest speaker.

Rita Murray is a first generation American businesswoman, professional speaker, top secret government contractor, TV Host, web producer, and private pilot. She has worked for GE, Lockheed, and other corporations and is currently an owner of two small businesses, national in scope. Rita's here today because she's inspired by people who are passionate about creating great places to work and who recognize that each generation has a unique contribution to make!

So, let's all lighten-up, loosen-up and get ready to take away some powerful information as Rita shows us how to "survive and thrive" in our multi-generational world.

Would you please welcome Rita Murray!
